Detailed Overview

The lower part of Kinnaur Valley covers Kalpa, Sangla Valley and Chitkul having breathtaking views. Travelling to this region is indeed a delightful experience. Situated on the banks of Baspa River, Sangla Valley (at an altitude of 2.6%6 metres) is also known as Baspa Valley, You may have had a glimpse of its gorgeous meadows in movies and ads. However, nothing can beat the experlence of actually breathing in the crisp air and stunning sights of forest slopes and mountain ranges, with the Raldang peaks offering a gigantic backdrop. Nearly 28 km from Sangla Valley, at an altitude of 3450 meters, lies the last inhabited place in India before the Indo-Tibet border. Chitkul village is last Indian village and is a paradise for trekkers and nature lovers, alike. To witness the most spectacular sunrise, head to Kalpa, situated at an altitude of 2,960 meters, less than 60 km from Sangla Valley, Given Its strategic location close to the foot of the 6050-metre high Kinnar Kailash (the legendary winter home of lord Shiva) everything about this erstwhile haunt of Lord Dalhousie is simply majestic.
